Introduction to Psychoanalytic Concepts I

Wednesdays 8:00am-9:15am Intro courses I and II offer a contemporary foundation in psychoanalytic theory and application, beginning with ideas about analytic attitudes, clinical process, and how an analytic relationship is co-constructed. The analytic relationship, its mutual impact on analyst and patient in conscious, non-conscious and unconscious realms will be considered. We will look at contributions from major schools (Freudian, Ego, Object Relations), reading Freud, Klein and Winnicott, and will continue in Spring 2026 with contributions from Relational, Interpersonal, Self Psychology, and Intersubjectivity, reading Kohut, Mitchell, Bromberg and Benjamin, et al. Participants are encouraged to bring clinical examples which we will use to illuminate concepts.

Practical Analytic Subjectivity Wednesdays 9:30am-10:45pm In this course we will rethink clinical practice in contemporary terms looking back on the harm and usefulness of classical authoritarian neutrality, abstinence and anonymity and will elucidate some of the differences between classical and postclassical psychoanalytic thinking. We discuss such practical issues as starting an analytic practice, and the setting, frame and fee. With an emphasis on the analyst's self reflection and on ethics we will explore how we locate ourselves in the therapeutic process.

Clinical Case Conference Wednesdays 11:00am-12:15am This course is designed to support the clinician's work and offers opportunities to integrate clinical material with psychoanalytic concepts, including ethics, and ways to deepen the psychoanalytic process, with a focus on the therapist's self reflection, the clinical relationship, and ways to facilitate what is mutative for the patient. Attendees are encouraged to present their case material.
